In his 2013 address, Obama stated: My fellow Americans, the oath I have sworn before you today, like the one recited by others who serve in this Capitol, was an oath to God and country, not party or faction. And we must faithfully execute that pledge during the duration of our service. But the words I spoke today are not so different from the oath that is taken each time a soldier signs up for duty or an immigrant realizes her dream. My oath is not so different from the pledge we all make to the flag that waves above and that fills our hearts with pride. They are the words of citizens and they represent our greatest hope. You and I, as citizens, have the power to set this countrys course. You and I, as citizens, have the obligation to shape the debates of our time -- not only with the votes we cast, but with the voices we lift in defense of our most ancient values and enduring ideals. Let us, each of us, now embrace with solemn duty and awesome joy what is our lasting birthright. With common effort and common purpose, with passion and dedication, let us answer the call of history and carry into an uncertain future that precious light of freedom. At a fundraiser, Obama stated: One last thought I want to leave you with is a sense of optimism about how solvable our problems are. Its become fashionable to talk about how America cant recover from these kinds of challenges. You know what, thats what theyve said throughout our history. Theyve always underestimated the resilience and the strength of the American people. And weve been through tougher times before. And I, as you might imagine, spend a lot of time traveling all around the world. Theres not a country that wouldnt trade places with us. If you look at, as tough as things have been, the pace at which weve grown, the accessibility of solutions to our fiscal problems relative to whats happening in Europe, for example, whats required is not out of reach. It will require some tough choices. Most of all, it requires those on Capitol Hill to work across party lines to achieve some basic solutions. But we are poised to make sure that the 21st century is the American century, just like the 20th century was. Its going to require some work though, and this election is going to help determine it.
