

Critical and Historical Essays, Vol. 2 of 2 (Forgotten Books)

An amazing collection of source writings of massive historical value from the last few hundred years of the history of the United Kingdom. About the Author Thomas Babington Macaulay (1800 - 1859) Thomas Babington Macaulay, 1st Baron Macaulay, PC (25 October 1800 - 28 December 1859) was a nineteenth-century English poet, historian and Whig politician and Member of Parliament for Edinburgh. He wrote extensively as an essayist and reviewer, and on British history. The son and eldest child of Zachary Macaulay, a Scottish Highlander who became a colonial governor and abolitionist, Thomas was born in Leicestershire, England, and educated at Trinity College, Cambridge. Macaulay was noted as a child prodigy. As a toddler, gazing out the window from his cot at the chimneys of a local factory, he is reputed to have put the question to his mother: Does the smoke from those chimneys come from the fires of hell? Whilst at Cambridge he wrote much poetry and won several prizes, including the Chancellors Gold Medal in June 1821. In 1825 he published a prominent essay on Milton in the Edinburgh Review. In 1826 he was called to the bar but showed more interest in a political than a legal career. He never married and had no children.
