

Coming-of-Age Fiction (Our Freedom to Read)

Many of the most controversial young adult books portray young people on the cusp of maturity. Such books are often controversial for their frank depictions of issues of sexuality, personal identity, and more. Coming-of-Age Fiction contains entries on some of the most popular and often-challenged books in America. Coverage includes: The Alice books by Phyllis Reynolds Naylor; A Day No Pigs Would Die by Robert Newton Peck; The Goosebumps books by R.L. Stine; Then Again, Maybe I Wont by Judy Blume; We All Fall Down by Robert Cormier and many more.
