

Murder at Peacock Mansion (Blue Plate Cafe Mysteries Book 3)

Arson, a bad beating, and a recluse who claims someone is trying to kill her all collide in this third Blue Plate Cafe Mystery with Kate Chambers. Torn between trying to save David Clinkscales, her old boss and new lover, and curiosity about Edith Aldridges story of an attempt on her life, Kate has to remind herself she has a cafe to run. She nurses a morose David, whose spirit has been hurt as badly as his body, and tries to placate Mrs. Aldridge, who was once accused of murdering her husband but acquitted. One by one, Mrs. Aldridges stepchildren enter the picture. Is it coincidence that David is Edith Aldridges lawyer? Or that she seems to rely heavily on the private investigator David hires? First the peacocks die and then the people. Everyone is in danger, and no one knows who to suspect.
