Not illustrated. 1871 Excerpt: ...fetid marsh:--needing new eloquence from Herault. To say nothing of Champ-de-Mars, and Fatherlands Altar there; with urn of slain Defenders, Carpenterslevel of the Law; and such exploding, gesticulating and perorating, that Heraults lips must be growing white, and his tongue cleaving to the roof of his mouth. Towards six oclock let the wearied President, let Paris Patriotism generally sit down to what repast, and social repasts, can be had; and with flowing tankard or light-mantling glass, usher in this New and Newest Era. In fact, is not Rommes New Calendar getting ready? On all house-tops flicker little tricolor Flags, their flagstaff a Pike and Liberty-Cap. On all house-walls,--for no Patriot not suspect will be behind another,--there stand printed these words: Republic one and indiw.rzble; Liberty, Equalily, Fraternibl, or Deat/2. As to the New Calendar, we may say here rather than elsewhere that speculative men have long been struck with the inequalities and incongruities of the Old Calendar; that a New one has long been as good as determined on. Marechal the Atheist, almost ten years ago, proposed a New Calendar, free at least from superstition: this the Paris Municipality would now adopt, in defect of a better; at all events, let us have either this of Marechals or a better,--the New Era being come. Petitions, more than once, have been sent to that effect; and indeed, for a year past, all Public Bodies, Journalists, and Patriots in general, have dated First Year of I/se 1epublic. It is a subject not without difficulties. But the Convention has taken it up; and Romme, as we say, has been meditating it; not Marechals New Calendar, but a better N...
