Not illustrated. 1860 edition. Excerpt: ... rayBterious literary fraternity known to the public as our own correspondents seems to De an essential link of the peculiarities and developments of the age. Every paper is ambitions to have its own correspondents, and desirous to make everybody believe that it has them everywhere. For aught I know, the nineteenth century will also organize a regular corps of this fraternity throughout the spirit-world, to assist their earthly brethren to enlighten and inform and often to mystify and befool the children of earth. Aye, who shall say that even the veritable Times itself may not some day have its regular staff of spiritual own correspondents sending to its columns communications from that undiscovered country, from whose bourne, Shakespeare has perhaps somewhat erroneously said, no traveller returns. The introduction, then, of an own oorrrespondent to the Star is in keeping I with the age, and may also be suggestive of j the time when Mormon papers will be! found in many lands, and Mormon own correspondents be stationed throughout both the visible and the invisible world. But enough of this. I will now take my readers direct to the Manchester Pastoral Conference. This Conference of the Church was held on the 1st of Jnne, in the Assembly Room, Free Trade Hall, Manchester. The mornings meeting was announced to commence at half-past ten oclock. By the specified time nearly the whole of the mornings congregation had assembled; and although it was not so large as that of the afternoon, the Assembly Room of the Free Trade Hall was on this occasion tolerably well filled with Latter-day Saints. It was evident that, with scarcely an...
